NOTES:

1) This is a tale that Morris would often tell us about his Granmother (Mary Dobinsky). - One thing I shall always remembler about my grandmother was her pot roast. It was her favorite "fancy meal" and was always cooked with lots of marrow beans. My grandmother always said, "I like to cook with a bean more". And when you ate at my grandfather's table, it was always done with a large piece of bread in your hand. Bread was cheaper than pot roast. It was cheaper than potatoes and beans too. My grandfaher wanted you to fill up on bread, not meat, potatoes or beans. If I listen carefully, deep in the recesses of my mind, I can still hear him. !INu, die brot! Well, where's the bread!"
